

Durham University
Modern Slavery Statement
(Financial Year 2020/21)

This statement responds to S.54 of the Modern Slavery Act 2015 and sets out the steps that Durham University has taken and is continuing to take to ensure that modern slavery or human trafficking is not taking place within our business or supply chain.

Modern slavery encompasses slavery, servitude, human trafficking and forced labour. Durham University has a zero tolerance approach to any form of modern slavery. We are committed to acting ethically and with integrity and transparency in all business dealings and to putting effective systems and controls in place to ensure that there is no slavery or human trafficking in our supply chains or in any part of our business. The processes set out below reflect the University's commitment to acting ethically and with integrity across the organisation.

This statement was approved by the University Executive on 27 October 2020.

Our business

Durham University is a legally independent and autonomous institution established by an Act of Parliament in 1832 and Royal Charter (number RC000650). Durham University is an exempt charity under the Charities Act 2011.

Durham University is a higher educational institution based on a collegiate model and composed of academic departments, research institutes, administrative departments, libraries and museums.

We seek the highest distinction in research and scholarship and as a world-leading research institution we are committed to excellence in all aspects of education, student experience, research, and the transmission of knowledge. The University's strategy 2017-2027 can be accessed here www.durham.ac.uk/strategy2027

Our policies

We operate a number of internal policies to ensure that we are conducting business in an ethical and transparent manner. These include:

1. Public Interest Disclosure (Whistleblowing) Policy: Our Whistleblowing Policy makes clear to all employees that they can raise concerns about how colleagues are being treated, or practices within our business or supply chain, without fear of reprisal. The process is set out here:

<https://www.dur.ac.uk/resources/business.assurance/WhistleblowingPolicy.pdf>

2. Employee Code of Conduct: This explains the manner in which we behave as an organisation and how we expect our employees and suppliers to act. The relevant guidance is set out here: <https://www.dur.ac.uk/hr/realisingpotential/>

Our suppliers

The University procures goods and services from suppliers across the world. The University's supply chain includes a large number of diverse suppliers including suppliers of goods and services that directly support our teaching, student support and research activity for example, large scale laboratory equipment and laboratory consumables. As part of our initiative to identify and mitigate risks in respect of our supply chains and to mitigate the risk of slavery and human trafficking occurring in our supply chains we conduct due diligence on all suppliers before awarding a contract to them. These due diligence measures include an online search to ensure that a particular organisation has never been convicted of offences relating to modern slavery and human trafficking; as well as a requirement that suppliers demonstrate that they provide safe working conditions.

We require suppliers to conform to our Corporate, Social and Environmental Responsibility Policy that can be accessed here:

<https://www.dur.ac.uk/procurement/suppliers/cser/>

The University is affiliated to Electronics Watch, an independent third party, who provides a monitoring service on supply chains assessing how suppliers are addressing issues and ensuring that slavery and human trafficking is not taking place in any part of the University's business or supply chains.

Contracted suppliers continue to work with NETPositive Futures regarding sustainable action plans, which include monitoring high-risk areas for modern slavery.

Training

We regularly conduct training for our procurement teams so that they understand the signs of modern slavery and what to do if they suspect that it is taking place within our supply chain.

Future Actions

Procurement policies, guidance and procedures are to undergo a comprehensive review in 2020/21, alongside a strategic supply chain mapping exercise, which will further identify supply chain risks including potential modern slavery concerns. Where high risk areas are identified they will be discussed/investigated with suppliers (not limited to first tier suppliers) and appropriate action will be taken.

Professor Stuart Corbridge
Vice-Chancellor and Warden