

New Directions in Qualitative Health Research

From Patient Experiences to Participatory Action Research

Date: Monday November 5

Time: 9:00 – 17:00

Location: University Medical Center Groningen

Program

9.00 Registration and coffee

9.30 Opening by chair of the day

9.40 Opening session: What is the point about collecting data on patient experiences?:

9.45 What is the point about collecting data on patient experiences - Mark Schlesinger, Yale School of Public Health and Rachel Grob, University of Wisconsin

10.30 What are other ways of understanding patient experiences a literature review – Louise Davies, Dartmouth college

11.00 Coffee/tea break

11.30 Parallel sessions:

- Online interviews and online focus group interviews - Lisa Hinton, Oxford University, and Manna Alma, UMCG Applied Health Research
- Qualitative analysis of online forum discussions about mental health problems in young Moroccan-Dutch people – Madelien van der Beek, Dimence
- Online illness narratives and webcare interaction: an investigation of linguistic features – Joyce Lamerichs, VU Amsterdam

12.15: Lunch and meet the expert sessions:

- |                          |                                 |
|--------------------------|---------------------------------|
| o Focus group interviews | o Analysis of qualitative data  |
| o In-depth interviews    | o Cultural issues               |
| o Interviewing children  | o Participatory action research |
| o Online research        |                                 |

13:30 Participation in participatory action research: who, what for and how? – Gaby Jacobs, Fontys Hogeschool & University of Humanistic Studies

14.15 Parallel sessions:

- “Acceleration rooms”: digital brainstorm activities – Marian Feitsma, CMO Stamm
- Using rich pictures to collect emotional responses - Esther Helmich, UMCG, Institute for Medical Education
- Collecting data among people with dementia by using audio diaries – Zerline Hennings and Rikke Koomen, Tao of Care

15:05 Coffee/tea break

15.20 Closing session: What next? Connections to low-and middle income countries

15.25 Cancer in the Arab World – Abir Hamdar, Durham University

15.50 Where next? The potential and the challenges of learning from experiences in low and middle income countries – Lisa Hinton, Oxford University

16.20 Closing by chair

16.30 Drinks